

Dr. Michael P. Tilford

Born 1936 – Died 1996

Some years ago I had the pleasure of accompanying the President Eugene Hughes as we visited some of our graduates in South Asia. One of the cities we visited was Aloh Star in northern Malaysia. There we visited one of the images of the reclining Buddha. In a room below the Buddha were tiny pictures of the dead most with a burning candle to commemorate the loved one. So long as the dead one was remembered, he or she wasn't really dead, this is, forgotten. So it is with Dr. Michael Tilford. This conference and his picture in the program mean that he is not forgotten. But even were it possible to forget Michael, his works live on after him. While I remember him well, I know that there are some who never had the pleasure of meeting Michael and working with him.

 - He was also the advisor and mentor for numerous graduate students and the role model for many more.
- He died unexpectedly 11/6/96 while acting as a consultant to William Patterson College on its efforts to become a university.

The Private Record

- Michael was one of 5 children. His father died shortly after he was born and his mother raised him and his 4 siblings in rural Oklahoma.
- He married Marilyn and they had three children: Mark, Michelle, and Maria – all of whom are well on their way to splendid careers.
- He was also a teacher by example. Michael and Marilyn’s marriage was a model for many of us.
- Michael was also an avid golfer. One example of his ability was reported by Lynwood Sexton, a former regent and close friend of Michael’s. Michael couldn’t even see the flag for the hole they were playing. He took his shot but couldn’t find his ball anywhere leading up to the green. He looked and finally another golfer said “it went into the hole.” Michael treasured his hole-in-one as a tribute to his prowess as a golfer.
- How many people does a person like Michael influence for good over a short lifetime of 60 years? How can you measure influence?
 - He was instrumental in using the Mill Levy funding from the City and County to help faculty earn Doctorates.
 - He was instrumental in the start of the Committee on Diversity and Multiculturalism.
 - Countless numbers of students, associates, and friends were influenced by his steady, always gentlemanly, commitment to social justice.
 - In a world that grows increasingly shrill and uncivil, Michael Tilford exemplified the good that can be done by lowering one’s voice, being civil and courteous, and looking for sensible solutions to problems even if those problems may take time to resolve.
- In his many efforts to increase diversity, Michael was encouraged and supported by his wife who is with us today – I would like to introduce Marilyn Tilford.
- Michael Tilford is not forgotten. He lives on in this conference and in the good works that stem from it.
